RIVER CRAFT HELD.

Storm and Fog Keep Vessels in Harbor-No Arrivals Yesterday.

The storm on the river yesterday is re river craft in harbor remained there, shelter as quickly as possible. In consevals of sailing craft in port yesterday and city to ride out the gale.

The wind was from the southwest, and in spite of the heavy rains thick fog covered the water for several hours. Then the wind shifted to the southwest and blew heavily. For a short time yesterday morning it looked as of the tide would get over the tops of the lower wharves, but as soon as the wind shifted to the westward the tide began to fall almost as rapidly as it came up. At the steel plant rapidly as it came up. At the steel plant where the weather bureau has a signal station, southwest storm warnings were Lying at Oyster Wharf. Heavy rain and high water prevented the raising yesterday of the big lighter belonging to H. Bryant's Son of Alexandria, which, laden with oyster shells, sank in the dock adjoining the District oyster wharf Thursday. It will be Monday or Tuesday before the lighter is floated. Friday and yesterday morning a number of men were employed in transferring the shells from the sunken lighter to one of Smoot's sand lighters, which had been brought up from Alexandria for the purpose. The downpour of rain yesterday fhorning forced a discontinuance of the work, and when the weather cleared and the men returned to work they found the tide so high as to almost cover the lighter and they could not work. As soon as the lighter is raised it will be taken to Alexandria for repairs. It is probable that after the shells have been taken off a tupboat with a steam syphon will have to be employed to put the lighter out. lighters, which had been brought up from

RIVER FISH IN MARKET.

Seining Operations at Windmil Point and The Gums.

Fishing operations have been started at both Windmill Point and the Gums fish-ing shores on the Potomac. Within the past week several shipments of rock. perch, catfish and a few bass have been received by dealers here.

Windmill Point, operated for Capt. Will Neitzy of this city, is the largest fishing shore worked on the river. The Gums, operated by Capt. Jake Faunce and Capt. Williams, is a close second in point of size. Seines at each place are over a mile long, exclusive of the shore lines. The mild summer like wheather has made it possible to start fishing operations. The mild summer like wheather has made it possible to start fishing operations on the river rather earlier than usual this year. Unless ice prevents, the seine-hauling operations will be kept up until the close of the shad and herring season next April.

The shores now in operation are the only ones on the Potomac to haul winter seine. In the spring several smaller shores will start seine hauling for shad, herring and other river fish. The bulk of their catch will be sent to the market here.

to sell his home, and in order to sell it quickly he puts his price down as low as $4,500-and this is not an unusual feature I am now citing—do you think it would be fair to the other owners of the ten or fifteen houses who have worked hard to pay the original price of $7,000 to have the news go broadcast through the city that one of the houses had sold for $4,500? The mere fact that one house in that particular row had sold for $4,500 would obviously have a deteriorating effect on any other house in that row, from a selling standpoint, that was offered at a figure above the forty-five-hundred-dollar mark. The fact of one house having been sold at a particularly low price would necessarily cause every man's house in that row to drop $2,500 kelow the original price. lumbia, I would very much like to voice my protest against the further enactment below the original price.
